Online Career Search Resources

(The JHU Career Center does not endorse any of these services.)

Sheridan Libraries

Access the JHU Libraries Alumni Portal to be provided with access to online databases and other resources for JHU graduates: <http://guides.library.jhu.edu/alumni>

Career One Stop

Website: www.careeronestop.org/

This website offers a career assessment that matches the user with potential career options. It gives information such as the outlook for the field, hourly wages, required education, and other information.

GoHopOnline

This is a Johns Hopkins Alumni networking site that allows users to connect with fellow alumni, find new career opportunities, and provide employment opportunities to current Hopkins students or recent graduates. Website: <https://gohoponline.com>

LinkedIn

This is a free online professional social networking service that allows users to create their own profiles based on their job experience and professional interests. These profiles can be used to connect with other professionals for the purpose of sharing knowledge and opportunities. Search for JHU alumni and check out the Groups function too. Website: www.linkedin.com

My Next Move

Website: www.mynextmove.org/

An affiliate of O*Net, this website is designed to help people in all stages of career development. Careers can be searched for by using key words or industries, and an interest assessment is available to match users with potential careers.

Net Impact

Website: www.netimpact.org/

This website aims to create a global community through which professionals and students can connect and help each other and the world. Net impact has many diverse resources, but its careers section is specifically tailored to job acquisition: there is a job and internship search portal that allows users to search for opportunities based on job type, experience level, and area of impact.

Occupational Handbook

Website: www.bls.gov/ooh/

This website allows users to search for jobs based on occupational groups and then by career. It provides information including, but not limited to, job summaries, required entry-level education, and median pay. The information was compiled by the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

O*Net

Website: <https://www.onetonline.org/>

This website is linked in the Occupational Handbook. Careers can be searched for based on industry, field of work, or by required skills or software. It provides information about areas of interest as well as outlooks for the field of work.

O*Net Online Skills Search

Website: www.onetonline.org/skills/

A division of O*Net, this website provides a skills-based search that matches users to occupations based on current or desired skills. It also allows users to explore the different occupations for more information.

In-person Career Consultation

Career One Stop

Career one stop also has a search function for in-person Career Centers. Alumni can search by city, state, or zip code in order to find Career Advisors near them.
