College career services no longer a last stop

By Ally Marotti Monday January 9, 2017 12:01 AM

CHICAGO - Alicia Mendoza was working two part-time jobs when she transferred into Northeastern Illinois University. Swamped with work, school and a daily commute, bolstering her resume with something extra was the last thing on her mind.

Colleges Really Need to Rethink the Career Advice They Deliver

A new report suggests most graduates don't find the current offerings very helpful.
